

There once was a vain emperor
who ruled over a small country.
He loved to buy new clothes.
Every morning, he met with tailors,
shoemakers, weavers and designers.

"This is a fine hat," said the tailor.
"And this is a fancy jacket,"
said the designer.
The emperor put them on.
"You look very handsome, Your Majesty," said the weaver.

The emperor looked in the mirror.
He was very pleased.
